CEDAR GROVE COMPOST IS ONLY NATURAL

It's made with a mixture of Pacific Northwest organic materials, including branches, brush, leaves, and grass clippings, along with post-consumer food and paper. The material is collected from local residential and commercial yard and food-scrap recycling programs and professional landscapers.

PIONEERS IN URBAN COMPOSTING

Cedar Grove started the compost market in the Pacific Northwest in the 1980s by partnering with the City of Seattle to collect curbside yard waste.

Since then, we have been continually evolving operations to bring waste materials to a higher use and create new market opportunities.

Today, we compost 350,000 tons of residential and commercial food and yard waste each year, repurposing it into a nutrient-rich soil.

WHY COMPOST?

Compost is natural and good for the environment. By turning garden prunings, food products, and vegetable trimmings into compost you:

- Improve soil quality and garden vitality
- Conserve water
- Recycle valuable nutrients and reduce the use of artificial fertilizers
- Reduce the amount of waste going to landfills

WE'RE TAKING ORGANICS FULL CIRCLE

Cedar Grove's family of compost products supports a sustainable, local economy that brings organic waste full circle.

Cedar Grove Compost is everywhere you look - in the region's yards, corporate campuses, schools, city parks, even along the sides of our freeways.

Our educational outreach, grants, sponsorships, and donations support local communities, schools, non-profits, farmer's markets and more.
